Blackhawk down in Iraq; at least 6 soldiers killed

UNITED STATES—A US Army Blackhawk helicopter was shot down in Iraq on Tuesday, killing six soldiers and wounding two others, according to US military officials.

The helicopter was shot down by a missile fired from an Iraqi anti-aircraft site. The missile hit the helicopter's tail rotor, causing it to lose control and crash into the ground.

The soldiers were killed in the crash. The helicopter was carrying a mix of troops and equipment. The incident occurred during a routine mission.

The US military is investigating the cause of the crash. It is possible that the helicopter was hit by a stray missile or that it was the result of a malfunction.

Echoes of Vietnam War

As the US military prepares for a possible invasion of Iraq, some observers are drawing parallels to the Vietnam War. They point out that the US has a large military presence in Iraq, and that the Iraqi government is hostile to the US.

However, others argue that the situation in Iraq is different from Vietnam. They point out that the US has a clear mission in Iraq, and that the Iraqi government is not as hostile as it was in Vietnam.

Despite the differences, the echoes of the Vietnam War are still heard. The US military is facing a difficult decision about whether to invade Iraq, and the public is divided on the issue.

The Vietnam War was a costly and controversial conflict. The US military suffered heavy losses, and the war ended in a stalemate. The echoes of that war are still felt today.

Sri Lanka leader revokes state of emergency decree

COLOMBO—President Chandrika Kumaratunga on Tuesday revoked a state of emergency decree that she had signed in 1999, ending a period of martial law in Sri Lanka.

The president said that the decree was no longer necessary and that the country was now in a state of normalcy. She said that the decree had been a necessary measure at the time, but that it was no longer justified.

The decree had been in effect for several years, during which time the government had imposed strict controls on the media and on public gatherings. It had also allowed the government to arrest and detain people without trial.

The revocation of the decree was a significant step towards restoring democracy in Sri Lanka. It was a move that had been long overdue, and it was a sign that the government was finally taking steps to reform itself.

The president's decision was met with widespread approval. Many people had been calling for the end of martial law for years, and this was a long-awaited move. It was a sign that the government was finally listening to the people and was taking steps to reform itself.

Iraq's final bid to avoid war only a ploy, US says

WASHINGTON—The United States on Tuesday rejected Iraq's final offer to avoid war, saying it was only a ploy to buy time.

The US said that Iraq's offer was not a genuine attempt to resolve the crisis, but rather a tactic to delay the inevitable. The US said that it was not willing to negotiate with Iraq until it had met its obligations under international law.

The US said that it was determined to remove Saddam Hussein from power and to disarm Iraq of its weapons of mass destruction. The US said that it was not willing to negotiate with Iraq until it had met its obligations under international law.

Figure 1 consists of 16 histograms arranged in a 4x4 grid. The rows represent different transmission rates: 0.001, 0.002, 0.005, and 0.01. The columns represent different population sizes: 100, 1000, 10000, and 100000. Each histogram shows the distribution of the number of contacts per individual. The x-axis for all histograms is 'contacts' and the y-axis is 'count'. The distributions are generally right-skewed, with most individuals having a low number of contacts. As the transmission rate increases (moving down the rows), the distributions become more skewed towards higher contact numbers. Similarly, as the population size increases (moving right across the columns), the distributions also become more skewed towards higher contact numbers.
